INTERESTS OF *AMICI

Led by the Muslim Bar Association of New York, amici are American religious or religiously-affiliated organizations who represent a wide array of faiths and denominations. Amici include congregations and houses of worship as well as professional, civil liberties, and immigrant rights groups who work with or represent faith communities (“Religious Organizations”). Amici have long supported Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals (“DACA”) as a compassionate and appropriate response to the humanitarian crisis posed by the hundreds of thousands of undocumented people brought to this country as children, before they could make choices of their own. Amici believe that enjoining DACA would indelibly harm the vitality of their spiritual communities, including by forcing committed members of their congregations and organizations to leave the country or return to the shadows. Indeed, certain amici have committed to providing sanctuary to those targeted for deportation. Amici are identified here by name, with a fuller description of their identities and interests attached to this memorandum at Appendix A.

Amici are:

STATEMENT OF THE ISSUES TO BE RULED UPON BY THE COURT

Before entering a preliminary injunction enjoining DACA, the Court must conclude, inter alia, that the public interest and the balance of harm favor its issuance. Here, if the requested injunction is granted, amici's congregants will be deported to the detriment of their congregations and communities, amici's humanitarian missions will be thwarted, and amici risk being targeted for immigration raids for honoring their conviction to protect DACA recipients. Do the public interest and balance of harm nonetheless favor granting the requested injunction?

SUMMARY OF THE ARGUMENT

Since DACA's inception in 2012, American religious communities of many faiths have supported it as a just and compassionate response to a moral and humanitarian crisis. The children and young adults who are eligible for or have benefitted from DACA (often referred to as "Dreamers") were, in most cases, brought to this country as children by their parents. They have lived most of their lives in the United States, typically with no memory of any other home. Only young people who have pursued education or served in our military, and have no significant criminal record, are eligible for DACA. If the Court grants Plaintiffs' requested injunction these individuals would face deportation to often dangerous and unfamiliar places, or a life in the undocumented shadows.

Amici believe, on the basis of faith and morality, that these children and young adults must be protected. Amici therefore offer this brief in opposition to Plaintiffs' request for a preliminary injunction in order to address how, in their view, the requested injunction would cause irreparable harm and constitute a severe detriment to the public. Amici have firsthand knowledge of the valuable contributions to faith and community made by DACA recipients and understand all too well the harm that enjoining DACA would cause. For example, ending DACA would put Andrea, a legal assistant at amicus American Friends Service Committee in

New Jersey, who came to the United States from Ecuador when she was not even two years old, at risk of deportation. Amici detail the stories of Andrea and others like her in Section II(A) below to provide the Court with a sample of the lives that are at risk of being upended. Amici also know, because of their religious and charitable work in Latin America and other regions, the challenges and dangers these young people face if they are deported.

Amici also have a direct stake in these issues beyond their religious concerns and the protection of their congregants. First, amici stand to lose the substantial benefits they currently enjoy as a result of the varied contributions that DACA recipients make to their congregations and institutions.

Second, if the requested injunction is entered and DACA recipients and DACA-eligible individuals are forced into hiding, amici will suffer an impairment of their ability to carry out their core mission to provide spiritual guidance and general assistance to people of all backgrounds and faiths.

Third, many amici have and will continue to offer sanctuary to those facing deportation. Amici's churches, mosques, and synagogues are ostensibly designated by U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement ("ICE") as sensitive locations to be avoided by enforcement officials, but ICE has shown a growing willingness to target and exploit, rather than avoid, sensitive locations. Amici will be on the front line of this conflict if DACA is enjoined, because honoring their convictions to protect DACA recipients will risk ICE raids on or around their houses of worship.

For the reasons set forth herein and in Defendant-Intervenors' and other amici's briefs, amici urge the Court to deny Plaintiffs' request for a preliminary injunction.

ARGUMENT

Plaintiffs have moved to enjoin the 2012 memorandum creating DACA, which would halt DACA in full. (See Dkt. 5.) As explained in Defendant-Intervenors' briefs, Plaintiffs' application should be denied, inter alia, because the balance of equities amongst the parties and the public interest weigh strongly against enjoining DACA. See, e.g., Winter v. NRDC, Inc., 555 U.S. 7, 20 (2008). Amici endorse the arguments set forth by Defendant-Intervenors, and submit this brief to further illustrate the irreparable harm that enjoining DACA would inflict upon amici and the public at large.

I. RELIGIOUS ORGANIZATIONS SUPPORT DACA AS A JUST RESPONSE TO A HUMANITARIAN CRISIS

Amici support DACA on moral, spiritual, and religious grounds. Although they represent different faiths and denominations, amici are in unequivocal agreement that DACA is a force for good in our society that should be protected. As amicus Catholic Charities Community Services of the Archdiocese of New York explains, “DACA is an important first step to acknowledging and growing the human and social contributions and needs of young immigrants and of our own communities.”<sup>1</sup> Those who are eligible for DACA or who already benefit from it “were brought to the United States” by their parents, “now have established roots, have built families, have contributed to their communities of faith, work, and family,” and their “energy, spirit, life, and heart are part of this nation, which can only benefit from their continued participation.”

For many amici, these convictions are deeply rooted in their faith and moral principles. Temple Sinai of Washington D.C., for example, believes that “as a Jewish institution, Biblical texts and our Jewish history inform our position on modern day immigration policy. Leviticus 19 explicitly says, ‘When a stranger sojourns with you in your land, you shall do him no wrong.’” St. Luke’s Episcopal Church in Long Beach, California, similarly states that “for us, this is a biblical rather than a political issue.” And as the Catholic mission Maryknoll attests, <sup>1</sup> Quotes from amici herein are drawn from interviews conducted by counsel in November and December 2017 to provide the Court with a fuller understanding of how DACA has impacted American religious communities.

“recognizing the hardships and struggles of immigrant families, and the tremendous economic and social contributions Dreamers make to the United States, we feel it is unethical to send Dreamers back to countries they hardly know, as well as a senseless loss to our nation.”

For others still, supporting DACA is part of their social justice mission. Christ Church Cathedral in Cincinnati has, in light of the Government’s immigration policy priorities, “focused its social justice concerns on matters of immigration and the impact that deportations or the repeal of DACA will have on God’s children.”

Amici and groups like them have, accordingly, objected vocally to recent efforts to repeal DACA. On September 5, 2017, when the federal government announced its decision to terminate DACA, countless religious groups and leaders released statements of condemnation. The United States Conference of Catholic Bishops publicly called the decision “reprehensible,” “unacceptable,” and “a heartbreaking moment in our history that shows the absence of mercy and good will.”<sup>2</sup> The Council on American-Islamic Relations described the move as a “heartless action [that] will only serve to create fear and anxiety for the Dreamers and their loved ones, and will force them back to living in the shadows, rendering them unable to contribute to our nation’s economy.”<sup>3</sup> And amici Union for Reform Judaism and Central Conference of American Rabbis declared it “morally misguided and poor public policy,” noting that “Judaism demands that we welcome the stranger and compels us to work for a just immigration system.”<sup>4</sup>

Amici agree wholeheartedly with these statements. Rev. Robin Hynicka of amicus Arch Street United Methodist Church (“UMC”) in Philadelphia, for example, describes the “mythology surrounding why people migrate” as a campaign to “criminalize immigration” and to paint all immigrants as “bad,” when in fact the “the real reasons for these migrations are not listened to, considered, or understood.” He explains: “From a faith perspective, we take a baptismal vow that states we will resist evil, injustice, and oppression in any form in which it presents itself. The current immigration system and the move to end DACA create unjust circumstances, made manifest in human suffering. The attempt to crack down on Dreamers is a serious, cynical, evil action that has nothing to do with safety or justice. We have a theological and moral obligation to oppose these forces.”

Amici include entities that have taken active steps to protect Dreamers. A nation-wide, interfaith network of communities and congregations known as the New Sanctuary Movement, of which many amici are a part, have pledged to stand in solidarity with immigrants facing deportation.<sup>5</sup> These groups provide preparedness training and legal counseling and referrals; accompany individuals to immigration hearings; run awareness programs and panel discussions; and conduct advocacy aimed at supporting immigrant communities through the lens of faith. Amicus New Mexico Faith Coalition for Immigrant Justice, for example, provides these services “in order to create better immigration laws and a more just system that supports the well-being of all,” and employs two DACA recipients in their three-person office. Similarly, amicus New Sanctuary Coalition is an interfaith network working “to reform immigration enforcement practices and policies, both locally and nationally, with a special focus on preserving family unity.” As explained below, many amici and congregations like them have offered themselves as places of sanctuary, providing shelter to those targeted for deportation actions.

Amici thus oppose with deep conviction any effort to terminate DACA, including the injunction requested in this case. As institutions of faith with a special interest in servicing vulnerable immigrant populations, amici have direct knowledge of the harm that such an injunction would cause to them and the people with whom they live, work, and worship.

II. ENJOINING DACA WOULD CAUSE AMICI, THEIR CONGREGATIONS, AND THEIR COMMUNITIES IRREPARABLE HARM AND POSES A GRAVE THREAT TO PUBLIC WELFARE

Enjoining DACA would not only imperil Defendant-Intervenors, it would directly harm amici and their congregants, clergy members, staff, clients, and communities.<sup>6</sup> In the words of amicus Church Council of Greater Seattle, “DACA-recipients are our brothers and sisters, relatives, service-providers, congregational members, initiators of small business, and protectors of our communities and nation,” and the end of DACA would “deprive hopeful and patriotic men and women of the opportunity to exercise their hopes and dreams, to the detriment of the common good.” Like our society at large, faith communities, according to the Albuquerque <sup>6</sup> Harm to amici is relevant to the third and fourth prongs of the preliminary injunction test. See Winter, 555 U.S. at 20 (plaintiff must demonstrate “that the balance of equities tips in his favor, and that an injunction is in the public interest”). Under the third prong, the Court must “balance the competing claims of injury” amongst the parties. Id. at 24 (internal quotation marks omitted). Harm to New Jersey-based amici equates to harm to Defendant-Intervenor New Jersey, who, as parens patriae, represents amici’s interests in this lawsuit. See Texas v. United States, 86 F. Supp. 3d 591, 625 (S.D. Tex. 2015) (“[P]arens patriae recognizes the interests that the State has in the well-being of its populace.”) (internal quotation marks omitted). Under the fourth prong, the Court must consider whether the requested injunction would “disserve the public interest.” Byrum v. Landreth, 566 F.3d 442, 445 (5th Cir. 2009). As members of the American public and leaders of religious communities across the country, amici are representative of the public interest. See Tex. Marine & Brokerage v. Bennington Marine, No. 1:12-CV-397, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 196805, at *24 (E.D. Tex. Oct. 17, 2012) (denying request for preliminary injunction because “the harm that it would inflict on a third party not represented in this action” would “disserve the public interest”).

Monthly Meeting of the Religious Society of Friends (Quakers), “stand to lose the tremendous investment made over many years to bring DACA recipients into adulthood with skills and multicultural perspectives that are sorely needed by the larger community and the nation.”

The requested injunction would cause harm on various levels. First, DACA recipients are vital members of amici’s congregations and workforces. The end of DACA will not only disrupt their lives, but harm amici who benefit from their participation. Second, enjoining DACA would impair the ability of amici and other religiously-affiliated organizations to carry out their missions to help people of all backgrounds and faiths. Third, as institutions of faith and sensitive locations for immigration enforcement purposes, many amici face the grim prospect that following their spiritual calling to provide sanctuary for targeted Dreamers will result in the religious entities themselves being targeted by immigration enforcement authorities, a concern that would increase dramatically if DACA were enjoined.

A. Direct Harm to Amici and their Congregants

To illustrate the irreparable harm at issue in this case, amici provide the Court with the following examples of individual DACA recipients brought to this country as children who have enriched their communities, organizations, and congregations.

Nancy.<sup>7</sup> Nancy, Associate Rector at amicus St. Luke’s Episcopal Church in Long Beach, California, came to the United States from Mexico at age seven. Like many Dreamers, Nancy did not know she was undocumented until her junior year of high school, when she applied to college and learned what a social security number was—and that she did not have one. Nancy describes her life after learning her immigration status as “in the shadows”; she could not get a driver's license, and could not drive a car for fear of getting pulled over and risking deportation. For a teenager in Los Angeles, this was no idle fear.

Nonetheless, Nancy was active in her faith community. The Episcopal Church served as an extended family during her childhood, and by the time she turned 17 Nancy led the largest youth group in the Episcopal Diocese of Los Angeles. So great was her dedication that the Church paid for her tuition to college and seminary school, where she obtained a Master's of Divinity degree. After DACA, Nancy was able to fulfill her dream of becoming an ordained Episcopal minister. Today, Nancy is the associate rector at amicus St. Luke's Episcopal Church, and the Diocese of Los Angeles's first Latina leader to have grown up in a Spanish-speaking Episcopal Church and gone on to pursue ordination. At St. Luke's, she is actively involved in immigrants' rights activism and education initiatives.

For Nancy, the potential end of DACA represents "complete fear and hopelessness." She and others like her have "made a life here, trusted the system and tried to do things the right way," but now "run the risk that we will be hunted down and sent to a country that we do not know."

Rafael. Brought to Los Angeles at three years old, Rafael, an office assistant with amicus New Mexico Faith Coalition for Immigrant Justice, was born in Guanajuato, Mexico. Rafael's parents, having risked everything to bring him to the United States, sought to instill in him the values of hard work and education. They succeeded. Rafael completed a Bachelor's Degree with a double major in History and Chicano Studies from California State University Dominguez Hills while working full time to pay his tuition and support himself. After DACA, Rafael went on to obtain a Master's Degree in American Studies at the University of New Mexico, where he is now a Ph.D. candidate and an instructor.

Rafael's parents also instilled in him the values of Catholicism. He believes that faith-based organizations "fill the gaps of social justice and service that many times nation-states do not offer." As such, he works for amicus New Mexico Faith Coalition for Immigrant Justice as an office assistant. Rafael is proud to contribute to their work, which he sees as fulfilling community needs and a natural expression of his Catholic faith.

For Rafael, enjoining DACA would lead to drastic and dangerous change. It would mean the end of access to the work that he loves and a halt to his career after graduation. Moreover, it would mean "going back to living in the reality of survival mode," forever uncertain of his place and permanence in his own home, and without opportunity to flourish and grow.

Andrea. Andrea is a legal assistant at amicus American Friends Service Committee. Andrea was born and baptized in Ecuador but brought to New Jersey by her parents when she was a year and a half old. Andrea grew up in the Catholic Church. She went to Sunday school, took First Communion, and received Confirmation at her church in the Newark area, where she continues to volunteer in youth groups and for fundraising activities.

Andrea's parents, like many parents of Dreamers, prioritized her education. Knowing she could not obtain financial aid, Andrea's parents, both union members, carefully saved. After Andrea earned a paralegal degree from community college, her parents put her through Rutgers University's undergraduate program. Nonetheless, until DACA, Andrea's life was one of fear and constraint. She kept her undocumented status secret and had to refrain from the normal day-to-day activities and jobs that her friends freely engaged in.

Andrea graduated from Rutgers summa cum laude. After DACA, she was hired as a paralegal at a law firm and was proud to have a job and a salary. Andrea's dream is to go to law school in the United States. For her, enjoining DACA would bring her dream to a halt and threaten to send her to Ecuador, a place in which she has not set foot since she was an infant. In the face of this peril, Andrea maintains, “I love this country and I can’t imagine living elsewhere.”

* * *

The harm that these individuals would suffer as a result of the end of DACA is readily apparent. See Nunez v. Boldin, 537 F. Supp. 578, 587 (S.D. Tex. 1982) (“Deportation to a country where one’s life would be threatened obviously would result in irreparable injury.”); Kalaw v. Ferro, 651 F. Supp. 1163, 1167 (W.D.N.Y. 1987) (enjoining deportation proceeding and finding irreparable harm because “petitioner’s deportation would make her ineligible for any subsequent application for legalization”). Amici would be harmed as well; not only do people like Nancy, Rafael and Andrea contribute richly to religious and faith-based organizations through their own individual efforts, they serve as mentors and inspire others to give back to institutions from which they have benefitted. If Plaintiffs obtain the relief they seek, nearly 800,000 Dreamers—many with stories similar to the three detailed above—will be forced out of the country or into hiding. Amici will suffer incalculable harm if they are deprived of the contributions and talents of these young congregants and community members.

Moreover, as amici know from their work in other parts of the world, Dreamers deported would face tremendous challenges and even physical danger. For example, Gerry Lee and others from amicus Maryknoll Office for Global Concerns have lived and worked with impoverished families in Mexico, El Salvador, Guatemala, and other countries to which DACA recipients face deportation. In Haiti, for example, “Maryknoll Sisters have witnessed the bare struggle for post-disaster survival in the massive slums of Cite Soleil, where they help residents subsist from gardens grown in discarded tires on turf fought over by rival gangs.” In El Salvador, a Maryknoll Lay Missioner witnessed “the anger and pain that pervades communities preyed upon by powerful gangs, where immediate survival forces youth to face grim choices between lives of drugs and guns—or escape.” In Guatemala, a Maryknoll Father reports on the “rising rates of femicide” and sums up what motivates millions of rural migrants in a single word: “desperation.” And along the U.S.-Mexico border, Maryknoll Missioners hear daily the “stories of desperation from the countries to which many Dreamers might be returned,” namely, that “poverty, starvation, extortion, sexual assault, gang violence, and political oppression are among the conditions cited as triggers to leave.” In one such encounter in Nogales, Sonora, “a man travelling north with his son from Honduras merely pointed south and said, ‘There is no life there anymore.’” Children raised in America knowing no other country should not have to face deportation into such conditions.

B. Impairment of Amici’s Ability To Carry Out Their Missions

It goes without saying that religious and faith-affiliated organizations such as amici play a vital role in society. Countless lives have been uplifted and enriched by the spiritual guidance as well as the material and legal assistance these institutions provide. Immigrants and their families—including children brought to this country at a young age—are among the groups that have benefitted most from the support furnished by amici and similar organizations. By aiding such vulnerable individuals, faith-based organizations including amici have helped to make their entire communities more prosperous, united, and civically engaged than they otherwise would be.

Granting the requested injunction would undermine these efforts by making it virtually impossible for amici to continue their outreach to Dreamers and their families, causing amici irreparable harm. See Opulent Life Church v. City of Holly Springs Miss., 697 F.3d 279, 296 (5th Cir. 2012) (finding zoning ordinance caused church irreparable harm because it “frustrate[d]

[the church's] religious mission" and "community service programs"); OCA Greater Hous. v. Texas, No. 1:15-cv-679-RP, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 118675, at *12 (W.D. Tex. Sep. 2, 2016) (finding irreparable harm to non-profit group where election law "hindered" one of the group's "core missions—promoting civic participation and civic education"). Amici cannot reach people in need if those people are hiding in the shadows or have been deported. If the requested injunction is granted, amici and similarly-situated organizations will lose their ability carry out their core mission to assist those in the greatest need of help. This will result in the needless suffering not only of at-risk individuals, but of their communities as a whole.

C. As Sensitive Locations for Immigration Enforcement Purposes, Some Amici Will be Called Upon to Provide Sanctuary While at the Same Time Risking Being Targeted for Immigration Raids

Finally, religiously-affiliated organizations like amici occupy a unique position in matters of immigration enforcement, particularly with respect to DACA. Pursuant to an October 2011 memorandum by then-ICE Director John Morton, ICE is not to engage in immigration enforcement actions such as arrests, interviews, searches, or surveillance at churches, synagogues, mosques, or other houses of worship, unless exigent circumstances or other law enforcement purposes exist, or if prior approval is obtained (the "ICE sensitive locations policy").<sup>8</sup> In 2016, while the prior administration was still in office, then-Secretary of Homeland Security Jeh C. Johnson publicly reiterated that "when enforcing the immigration laws, our personnel will not, except in emergency circumstances, apprehend an individual at a place of worship, a school, a hospital or doctor’s office or other sensitive location.”<sup>9</sup> The ICE sensitive locations policy remains in effect today, at least as an official matter.<sup>10</sup>

The ICE sensitive locations policy recognizes that houses of worship are sacred spaces of sanctuary and peace, where community members can go and be without fear of harassment or arrest. Many amici and others like them proudly fulfill that role and have pledged to offer their churches, synagogues, and mosques as sanctuaries to those at risk of deportation. Temple Sinai DC, Christ Church Cathedral in Cincinnati, St. Luke’s in Long Beach, Arch Street UMC in Philadelphia, Albuquerque Friends Meeting, the many members of amici New Mexico Faith Coalition for Immigrant Justice and New Sanctuary Coalition, and others have publicly declared their status as sanctuary congregations. These organizations maintain dedicated, furnished space for visitors who need protection, and rely on their congregants for support in doing so.

In each case, the decision to become a sanctuary congregation is made after careful discussion among congregations and communities, and reflects broad religious consensus on this issue. The Albuquerque Friends Meeting, for example, when called upon to respond to an urgent need for sanctuary by a community member, convened their members and attenders. “Through a process of deep discernment together—and in commitment to our Quaker values of Equality and Community—we were led to a profound sense of Spiritual Unity, meaning we were ‘One in the Spirit,’” and the Meeting collectively committed to providing sanctuary. Many amici reported that these decisions, while weighty, were not difficult to make. When Arch Street UMC was called upon to house a man in danger of immigration detention, “the conversation among the congregation wasn't 'will we do this,' but how?" They provided sanctuary to the man in question for 11 months. In Phoenix, Shadow Rock United Church of Christ provided sanctuary to a man facing deportation whose wife is pregnant and young son is in the midst of leukemia treatment. The church's reverend stated in a public interview that the man "shouldn't be prosecuted," but rather "lifted up, used as an example of what it means to be a father."<sup>11</sup>

Under the current administration, however, the parameters and application of the ICE sensitive locations policy are increasingly in doubt. ICE has already begun to target areas adjacent to places of worship for enforcement actions, to worrisome effect. For example, last year on a freezing cold morning in Alexandria, Virginia, a dozen ICE agents surrounded a group of Latino men as they emerged from a church hypothermia shelter where they had spent the night. Six men were arrested and taken away in vans.<sup>12</sup> After church leaders demanded and were refused the names and locations of the men taken, Governor Terry McAuliffe and Senator Tim Kaine both sent letters to ICE inquiring about the raid and their enforcement policies near churches. ICE responded to neither.<sup>13</sup> In suburban Illinois, ICE agents tricked a worshiper into leaving a church service—by texting him from his cousin's cell phone about a fictional car accident—and arrested him at a neighboring McDonald's. They arrived in unmarked cars and wore vests that said “Police.” A retired ICE supervisor, interviewed after-the-fact, praised this strategy as “actually . . . quite creative.”<sup>14</sup>

ICE has shown a propensity to target sensitive or controversial locations other than religious institutions as well. In Charlotte, North Carolina, ICE conducted raids and arrests within two miles of a predominantly Latino elementary school.<sup>15</sup> Students witnessed the arrests as they passed by in school busses.<sup>16</sup> In El Paso, Texas, a Latina woman was taken into custody by ICE agents dressed in plain clothes after she left a courtroom in a county courthouse. The criminal complaint filed against her indicates that ICE knew she was living at a domestic and sexual abuse resource center.<sup>17</sup>

These incidents indicate that instead of abiding by the spirit of the sensitive locations memorandum—that is, to avoid immigration enforcement at sensitive locations—ICE is using houses of worship and other locations as lures for easy, unsuspected surveillance and arrest. This puts amici in the untenable and unacceptable position of at once heeding their faith-based calling to provide sanctuary while at the same time attracting the attention of those who would do harm to the people amici seek to protect. This crisis of conscience has sown fear and anxiety among amici and their congregants and supporters. These concerns will be greatly exacerbated if the requested injunction is granted and DACA is enjoined.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, amici respectfully urge the Court to deny Plaintiffs' motion for preliminary injunction.
